

I don't want the government reading my e-mail any more than I want them reading my paper mail. Passage of legislation of this type is just one more example of American's trading in their civil liberties for security. A perfectly secure existence devoid of liberty is no kind of existence at all (I think the founding fathers would agree with me on this point.)